

Researching In The Wiki

What is the Wiki?

The Wiki is a compilation of resources available to the genealogy researcher. Ideally, it provides the researcher with information and the best resources, along with a synopsis of those resources, available for their area of interest. The Wiki is not a repository for names or family histories

Featured content

- United States Pages
- American Indian Pages
- Historical Record Collection Pages
- British Pages
- The Foreign Language Wikis

The United States section of the Wiki contains:

- A page for the country
- A page for each state
  - Includes topic pages for the state
- A page for each county/parish in the state
- Pages for some major cities

The Foreign Language Wikis . . .

The foreign language Wikis are in the early development stages. Each of these will have their own teams working on them and maintaining them. Currently, there are 10 in process:

- Chinese
- French
- German
- Italian
- Japanese
- Korean
- Portugese
- Russian
- Spanish
- Sweedish

Searching

Keywords, Search the FamilySearch Wiki the same way you would search Wikipedia, by keywords like DAR or Daughters of the American Revolution. Enter the place, subject, record type or the name of the article in the search box. (Family names and information on specific families are not found on the FamilySearch Wiki.

Not Phrases, You will not receive the best results if your searches include phrases like "How do I find records for the DAR." Phrases can be used to search Google but the Wiki search engine is not designed for this type of search.

Advanced Search Tips

Use terms "AND," "OR," and "-" (the hyphen for NOT) to help define a search (this is called a boolean search).

Search Strategies

- Think about what you want to find out about an ancestor. Think about word variations that may be used to describe that type of record. For example, if you want to locate a birth record, this may also appear under the headings "Births," "Vital Records" or "Civil Registration."
- Second, consider the location where that event may have happened. If you don't have a specific locality, start big. Even searching under "United States Birth" may give you hints on trying to narrow down your search.\
- If the search results do not help you locate what you need to learn about an ancestor, think about other records that may possibly contain the information you want to learn. For example, a death record may contain an ancestor's birth date and place to make it easier to locate the ancestor's parents or other helpful information.

Watching Pages

The Wiki has a collection of special pages and tools to keep track of what is going on. You can watch for example:

- recent changes to all pages
- the revision history: all changes made to one page
- the contributions of one specific user
- newly created pages

To monitor recent changes to all pages, you go to Special Pages and choose “Recent Changes.” This displays all edits, file uploads, page moves, deletions and other actions done in the wiki.

In the menu on top it offers a collection of links to customize your display: limit the number of changes shown, the number of days or restrict it to edits to a certain namespace. You can also hide edits marked as minor (don't forget that major changes can be flagged by a user as minor anyway).

One line in recent changes consists of several links:

diff displays the difference to the previous revision of the page, hist links to the revision history of the page, the link with the full title of the page brings you to the current version.

If the title is in bold, it indicates that it is on your watchlist.

Next is a flag describing the article modification type:

N signalizes a new page,

m a minor edit,

b an edit made by a bot.

Following the timestamp is a number within parentheses with a + or -. This refers to the number of bytes that have been added or removed.

Next, the user is mentioned with a link to their user page and their talk page or to their contributions (in the case of anonymous users).

Last, there is an edit summary, appearing in italics, if the user submitted

E-mail

If you have supplied an email address, you will need to click the verify address button in order to use these functions. You will receive an email; simply open it and follow the link to enable the following functions.

- E-mail me when a page I'm watching is changed
- E-mail me when my user talk page is changed
- E-mail me also for minor edits of pages
- Enable e-mail from other users
- Send me copies of emails I send to other users

Languages

From your preferences you can select what language you would like the interface to be in. Only the buttons like 'edit' and 'talk', in addition to a few pages in the sidebar, will be affected.

Skin
Files
Date and time
Editing
Recent changes

Watchlist

Setting to control the behavior of the watchlist. Most of these options are also available on the watchlist display itself, but by setting them in your preferences you control the default behavior, i.e. Every time you visit the watchlist it will do the same.

Search

Default settings for searches including how many results to display and how much context to show for each result. Check the boxes next to the namespaces which you want to show up, the first time that you search for something. You can override this when doing an actual search, by checking or unchecking the boxes at the bottom of the search results screen.

USER PAGE

A user page is a page about a wiki user, someone who registered on the wiki. If you have registered, you can create your own user page.

Your user page is linked at the top of the Personal tools section of the menu bar.

More importantly, others will see links to your user page from various places which assist wiki collaboration. They include the 'Recent changes' and page 'history' displays.

You can also link to your user page within text of a wiki page, which is mainly useful on talk pages when you sign your name.

Creating your user page

This will help other users and contributors learn about you and your interest in family history.

- Using the navigation menu on the right side of the page, expand Personal Tools by clicking on the arrow out to the right.
- The first item you see under Personal Tools should be your username. Click on this, and it will take you to your user page.
- Before you make your first edit to your user page, a message will display there saying "This page has not been created yet." Do not let that confuse you; just click on Edit This Page and begin typing.

What to put on your user page

User pages are just as flexible as any other wiki page, and your user page is a page all about you, so generally people will leave you to freely write your user page in whatever format you like. Think of it as a 'profile' page. It's a feature that's in the wiki for the purpose of helping other people know who a contributor is and of bringing the online community closer together. You might like to mention where you are from and what your job is. You can also state what your main areas of interest are in relation to the topic of the wiki and describe contributions you have made or areas where you are interested in contributing.

Helping others find you

If you are involved in a community where individuals know your full name and would like to help others find your user page by searching on your name, you can create a new page with the title of your full name, then create a redirect to your user page. This will bring your user page up first in the search results if other users search on your name.

User Contributions

When viewing another person's user page, an additional link, "user contributions", appears in the 'toolbox' area (bottom right). This takes you to a list of all of this user's wiki edits. Use this to get an idea of how prolific a contributor somebody is or to track down edits made by a user who is causing trouble/making bad wiki edits.

What Links Here ...

This is the first selection under the Toolbox heading on the right side navigational menu. This feature can prove to be a valuable research resource by suggesting pages that might not readily come to mind. Clicking on this option generates a hyperlinked list of every page in the Wiki that is linked in any way to the page you are currently on.

Research Forums

While not actually a part of the Research Wiki, you can communicate with the Support Team, as well as other members of the Wiki Team, on the four Wiki threads on the Research Forums.

Wiki Trainers ~ This forum is especially for FHC Trainers and is a place to post questions or discuss issues concerning working with the Wiki.

Contributors Corner ~ This forum is the place that new ideas for the Wiki, as well as changes being considered, are discussed.

Contributor Help ~ This forum is much like the Wiki Trainers forum, but for general Wiki users. It is ok to post your general help questions in this forum if you would like to, but we recommend using the Trainer's forum.

WikiProjects ~ This forum is the place ongoing projects are discussed.

DISCUSSION/TALK PAGES

Every page has an associated Discussion or Talk page which can be used for discussion and communicating with other users. For example, an article on London birth records will have a discussion page where Wiki users might make suggestions for improving the article or call into question the article's accuracy.

How to add your comments to a discussion page.

- Make sure you have registered and signed-on to the Wiki so you can have rights to edit the discussion page
- Click the the Discussion tab at the top of the page on which you want to add your comments.
- Click the + tab at the top of the page.
- In the Heading/subject field, give a title to your discussion point.
- Add your comments to the discussion page by typing in the editing box.
- When you are finished adding your discussion point, scroll to the bottom of the page and click the Save Page button.

User Talk pages

A "user talk page" is a place where you can leave a message for a specific wiki contributor. The user talk page is associated with their "user page".

The contributor will see a note at the top of every wiki page when they have received a message. They may be notified by email as well, although this cannot always be relied upon (since the email notification feature must be activated by supplying a valid email address, and clicking a confirmation link).

Getting Help

There are several options for the Wiki Trainer to obtain answers to their questions.

- Call Wiki Support 866-406-1830, #3. There is a missionary from the Support Team available from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. This is the fastest way to get a question answered in the event a you are working with a patron or in need of immediate assistance.
- Ask a question on the Wiki Trainer Skype chat. The members of the Support Team who are working with FHCs monitor this chat during weekdays from approximately 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. In addition, other Wiki Trainers may be active on the chat.
- Post a question on the Wiki Trainer thread on the Research Forums. This thread was created especially for the FHC Wiki Trainers, and the Support Team will also monitor it. We hope to eventually have active discussion dialogue between Wiki Trainers on this thread to share ideas, discuss issues, etc.

Vital Records

For early marriages see Western States Marriage Index.

Los Angeles County Registrar-Recorder/County Clerk

(for Birth, Marriage and Death records going back at least to 1852) Norwalk RR/CC Building
12400 Imperial Highway
Norwalk, CA. 90650

Office Hours: 8:00 am – 5:00 pm Monday through Friday (open 8 a.m. – 7 p.m. on the 3rd Thursday of every month) *Note: There are several other sites to get birth, marriage and death records in Los Angeles County but Norwalk is the only facility that you can view records personally. Viewing Vital Records: The following will provide you with the procedure for viewing vital records. Certificates and indexes of birth, death and marriage records not exempt from public inspections may be examined at the Office of the Registrar-Recorder/County Clerk between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. , Monday through Friday, except holidays. In addition to certificates on file, there are indexes of birth, death and marriages available for public inspection as follows: Births prior to 1905 and from 1964 to the present; Deaths from 1877 to the present; and Marriages from 1852 to the present. Records of confidential marriages performed pursuant to Family Code Section 500 are not available for public review. Certificates and indexes may be examined at no charge unless a deputy is requested search and/or retrieve more than five records. Random searches of the indexes or the certificates are not allowed. An application is required for each record searched. Information sufficient to identify the requested record must be provided.

Los Angeles County Death Records at the Family History Library:

Los Angeles County Death Records are available through the Family History Library System. First, search the index film for the year the person died. Note that in 1958–1960, there are separate film sets for different cities in Los Angeles County, including Los Angeles, Pasadena, and Long Beach. Note that entries in the county wide index with certificate numbers preceded by an "L" pertain to the Long Beach set of death certificates.

The California Death Records 1940–1997 can be searched for free on Rootsweb. California Death Records

Vital Records

Brief History of Vital Records in Missouri

In 1883, the Missouri General Assembly enacted legislation providing for the Board of Health to have supervision of the statewide registration of births and deaths. This supervision amounted to prescribing "such forms and recommend[ing] such legislation as shall be deemed necessary for a thorough and complete registration of vital and mortuary statistics through the state." (Laws of the State of Missouri, 1883, page 96/section 7) The State Board of Health was charged with preparing printed forms of certificates of births and deaths; these were to be provided to the clerks of the various counties and it was the duty of the county clerks to furnish the printed forms to the persons required to file birth and death reports.

This law did not make the reporting of all births and deaths mandatory. Due to non-compliance, the General Assembly repealed the statutes relating to the registration of births and deaths in Missouri in 1893.

It was not until 1910 that the General Assembly again provided for the registration of births and deaths on a statewide basis. Approved May 6, 1909, the act was to "provide for the immediate registration of all births and deaths throughout the state of Missouri by means of certificates of births and deaths and burial or removal permits; requiring prompt returns to the central bureau of vital statistics at the capital of the state, as required to be established by the state board of health, and to insure the thorough organization and efficiency of the registration of vital statistics throughout the state, and providing certain penalties" (Laws of the State of Missouri, 1909, page 538). Pursuant to this 1909 law, all births and deaths that occur in Missouri are reported to the Missouri Department of Health and Senior Services. The Bureau of Vital Records maintains these birth and death records.

Tips

- If at first you don't find a name, try again under another spelling.
  - Photocopy each ancestor's census. Identify where you found it.
  - Look for an ancestor in every census during her or his lifetime.
  - On the family group record show each person's census listings.
  - Study others in the same household, neighbors, and anyone with the similar names nearby on the census in community context.
